is conceded that the convention acted wisely and has selected the stronges: man in the county to contest with the Republicans. The hope of the Republicans that the late primary had engendered had blood among the Democrats was entirely dissipated by to-day's proceedings, and they realize that a united party confronts them. The Domocrats are better united than they have been for years.

The Radford delegates after the sonatorial nomination withdrew, and the county convention nominated Captain H. D. Wade for county clork and W. J. Halt as his deputy. The feature of the convention was the earnest and cloquent speeches made by Judge Phiegar in nominating Captain Wade, and latter in response to repeated calls on him.
